At Home: An Anthropology of Domestic Space (Space, Place and Society) By Irene Cieraad

In a volume that brings together a wide range of disciplines - art history, sociology, architecture, cultural anthropology, and environmental psychology - Irene Cieraad presents a collection of articles that focuses on the practices and symbolism of domestic space in Western society. These essays go beyond the discussion of conventional issues such as aesthetics and social standing. At Home takes an in-depth anthropological look at how different cultures use their homes as a visual model of the culture's social structure.

Editorial Review

Review

This volume on domestic space brings together research traditions that have never mingled before: art history, social history, women's studies, design history, architectural history, cultural anthropology, ethnology, sociology, housing sociology, environmental psychology, material cultural studies and consumer studies. . . . The book displays the varied approaches that can be taken when studying domestic space and is a very interesting read. (Area)

Amsterdam anthropologist Irene Cieraad edits this interdisciplinary collection of articles looking inward at Western urban living and examining what our homes reveal about our cultures and societies. (Today's Books)

Joyce Volz:

As a scholar exactly feel bored to be able to reading. If their teacher questioned them to go to the library or even make summary for some guide, they are complained. Just minor students that has reading's spirit or real their interest. They just do what the educator want, like asked to go to the library. They go to there but nothing reading very seriously. Any students feel that reading through is not important, boring in addition to can't see colorful images on there. Yeah, it is for being complicated. Book is very important for you personally. As we know that on this period of time, many ways to get whatever we really wish for. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore , this At Home: An Anthropology of Domestic Space (Space, Place and Society) can make you really feel more interested to read.
