Assaulting the Gates: Aiming All God's People at the Mission Field By Paul D. Borden

Learn the “Big Picture” approach that will aim your congregation at the mission field in your back yard, or around the world.

Many churches want to make the transition from an inward to an outward focus, from catering to the needs of members to reaching out into the world to make disciples of Jesus Christ. Too often they try to accomplish this radical change by taking half steps and partial measures, initiating a new program here or adding a new staff members there.

Yet this kind of change requires more. To succeed in changing its core focus this way, a congregation must learn strategic thinking; it must commit itself to seeing the big picture, and to taking the steps necessary to paint that picture afresh. Everyone, including pastors, lay leaders, key teams and groups, and the congregation as a whole must be involved in a process of transformation. Paul D. Borden, author of Hit the Bullseye and Direct Hit, knows that this transformation will not be easy. But if the target is bringing more people into saving relationship with Jesus Christ, what could be more worthwhile?

Editorial Review

About the Author

As an international consultant, judicatory leader, former large church pastor, and professor of homiletics, Dr. Paul Borden knows both what is required to transform congregations and judicatories and how to do it. Borden is Executive Minister of Growing Healthy Churches. He is in demand nationally as a church consultant, who helped initiate the "teaching church" movement, in which congregations learn from other congregations about excellence. His book Hit the Bullseye (Abingdon, 2006) has been used by over 50 denominations in leading change.

Previous assignments include Director of Church Consulting for the Evangelical Free Church of America and Academic Dean of Western Bible College. Paul holds a Ph.D. from the University of Denver, Th.M. from Dallas Theological Seminary and B.S. from Philadelphia College of Bible.
