Instances of Islamophobia: Demonizing the Muslim "Other" From Lexington Books

Chapters of this volume, written by authorities on Islamophobia from around the world, examine various instances of the topic and explore different discursive contexts such as media coverage and manipulation; political debates and discourses; and general attitudes and attitude-building in the public sphere. The book aims to further extend and expand discussions on the issue and to highlight some hitherto less discussed concerns.

Editorial Review

Review

This is an important book. Its in-depth analyses of Islamophobia span multiple continents and contexts, and present to the reader a cogent and timely look at a form of prejudice that is quickly eroding the pluralistic fabrics of American and European societies. (Nathan Lean, Georgetown University, author of The Islamophobia Industry)
